WILSON HAS BURLESON RESIGNATION

INEFFICIENT HEAD OF
P. O. DEPT. TO STEP OUTCABLED RESIGNATION TO PRESIDENT SOON
AFTER BEING CONDEMNED BY
ATLANTIC LABOR CONVENTION

"QUITS IN INTEREST OF PARTY"

WASHINGTON, July 8.—When President Wilson returns to New York today he will have in his possession the resignation of Postmaster General Burleson.

He offers to retire in the interests of the Democratic party. His resignation was cabled to Paris soon after the meeting of the American Federation of Labor which was held at Atlantic City and at which resolutions were passed condemning Postmaster General Burleson and his administration of postoffice affairs and wire control.

Replying to the cable President Wilson thanked Mr. Burleson for his attitude and stated that the matter would be held for his consideration on his return to America.

It is believed that the resignation of Mr. Burleson has been much desired by the administration for some time and now that it is in the President's hand it will save him from considerable embarrassment.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Postmaster General Burleson today refused to either deny or affirm that he had submitted his resignation to the President. At his office it was pointed out that it was customary for such matters to be discussed only from the White House and that it "would be indelicate to issue any statement." Burleson was one of the three cabinet members who did not go to New York City to greet the President on his arrival there. The others are Secretary of Commerce Redfield and Attorney General Palmer.

NEWSPAPER BIRD
MAN PREPARING
TO TAKE WING
HOMEWARD

Lieut. Murray, the New York aviator who hopped down into the park the evening of July 4th last, and when he discovered there was an admission charge for park entrance hopped right out over the fence again into Supt. L. P. Geynet's vegetable garden arrived in town yesterday with a couple of mechanics and is now giving his Sopwith Camel a going over preparatory to resuming his flight to New York.

Lieut. Murray is a genial young man and has made many friends in Clearfield since his unceremonious call. He had considerable experience as an army flyer and like all bird men is deeply in love with the flying game. When he dropped here he was carrying pictures of the world's championship battle at Toledo, Ohio, and just as soon as he could divest himself of his flying togs and get "both feet on the ground," so to speak, he jumped into an automobile and was whisked across the mountains to Tyrone where he caught a main line train for New York and got his pictures to the New York American office and into print four hours earlier than the other metropolitan newspapers.

The repairs to the machine are being held up through failure of the necessary parts to arrive by express and if they get here today as expected Lieut. Murray will resume his flight Wednesday or Thursday, stopping at Bellefonte on his way east.

R 34 TO START ON
HOMEWARD JOURNEY
IN THE MORNING

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The United States weather bureau today warned the commander of the British dirigible R-34 that it would be dangerous to start back to Great Britain tomorrow because of impending weather conditions.

MINEOLA, July 8.—Major H. G. Scott, commander of the dirigible R-34, announced shortly after noon today that he would probably start his return journey tomorrow morning at six o'clock. The delay in starting he said was due to the many repairs that had to be made to the engine. The R-34 will cruise over the city of New York for an hour before starting on its homeward trip.

LANSING COMING
HOME THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Secretary of State Lansing will sail for the United States this week it was announced here today. The sailing will not take place today however as has been reported from Paris. Under Secretary Polk will take Lansing's place at Paris in winding up the affairs concerning the peace treaty and the treaty now being made for presentation to Austria.

U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY DECLARES WAR ON SALOON
MEN WHO ARE VIOLATING SPIRIT OF PROHIBITION

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—Wholesale arrests of all saloon keepers and other persons selling liquor containing more than 1-2 or 1 per cent. alcohol will be ordered at once, declared U. S. District Attorney Crawford here today.

Agents of the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Office have obtained the evidence against the saloon men and are prepared to furnish the necessary information on which to make arrests. "I am now ready to act," said Mr. Crawford.

A major part of Pittsburgh's saloon men have openly defied the war time prohibition law although advised by their attorneys to get out of business. The Allegheny county authorities are co-operating with the Federal agents.

The government's interpretation of the war prohibition law is that it is a violation to sell for beverage purposes any liquors, whether spirituous, malt or vinous, that might be classed as intoxicating liquors having alcoholic contents, regardless of whether they are beer, wine or spirits. And in any case where they contain as much as one-half of one per cent. of alcohol the government's instructions are to institute prosecution in all cases where sales are made, treating such as illegal sales.

This would make it illegal to sell two and three-fourth per cent. beer, wine or any other beverage with that or even less percentage. The government's position is that it is an offense against the law to sell liquors of the above-mentioned class, and that it is not necessary to show that liquor is intoxicating as a matter of fact in each case where illegal sale is alleged, but simply to show that the liquor sold is alcoholic in its contents and as such is classed as intoxicating.

No prosecutions or arrests were made yesterday for violation of the prohibition law.

Attorney W. J. Brennan, counsel for many license holders, stated yesterday that he had been advising his clients since last Tuesday to close or cease selling 2 3/4 per cent beer.

Traffic in all the so-called "non-intoxicating" beverages, classed generally as "near-beer," by drug stores,

ties provided."

Mayor to Stop Sales

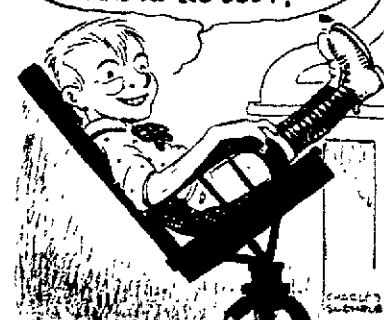

Basing his action on Mr. Cochran's opinion, it was said last night Mayor McDowell will at once order the discontinuance of the sale of any form of "near beer" by soda fountains and all other agencies except regularly licensed hotels and liquor dealers in Chester.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES

Mrs. Melvin Fullington, a former resident of Clearfield, died at her home in South Philadelphia on Saturday, July 5th, aged 62 years, 9 months and 11 days. She had been a resident of Philadelphia for more than 30 years.

PROJECT TO BE HELD NEXT WEEK COUNCIL HEARS

OVERRIDE MAYOR ON ALLEY VETO

Nine of the twelve members of Council participated in the deliberations of the borough legislature, at the semi-monthly session held in the borough building last evening. Chairman Fletcher presided and Mayor Chase was also present.

The mayor reported 21 arrests during June and the collection of $84 in fines and $16 in licenses for the month of June.

Tax Collector Taytor reported collections and payment to the Treasurer of $2934.92 during the past month.

Borough Engineer Hess reported on sidewalk lines and grades on Fifth street.

Street Commissioner Graham reported on general street work and the different Wards reports showed an unusually large amount of work being done throughout the town.

The 1919 Budget of the Board of Health calling for an appropriation of $144.65 which had been presented in February but never passed upon, was taken up and adopted. The budget provides for the following expenditures:

Tacks	25
Drayage	3.00
P. O. Box Rent	2.40
Jitney	10.00
Batteries	6.00
Postage	20.00
Telephone	18.00
Ply Trap Repairs	20.00
Uniforms	40.00
Printing and Stationery	100.00
Fumigating material	150.00
Disinfecting	25.00
Guards	30.00
Health Officer & Sec	900.00
Milk Inspection	130.00
	$1454.65

Borough Solicitor Urey reported regarding outstanding claims for curbing sewers etc and was directed to proceed at once to collect same. He also brought up the question regarding the width of West Front street at Nichols and was directed by Council to look after the interests of the borough in maintaining a 60 foot street there as the original plan calls for. The Solicitor and Engineer were also directed to secure a copy of the original plan of the W. D. Bigler Addition to West Clearfield Borough and have same placed on record.

Complaint was made by Health officer Farrell and Councilman Gordon regarding sanitary conditions on Bigler avenue and following the discussion the Street Commissioner and Sewer Committee were instructed to proceed at once to have the sanitary sewer will extend from Sixth to Twelfth street and is an improvement very badly needed.

Chairman Leitzinger of the Highway Department reported that the matter of the improvement of Third street had been taken up with the Pennsylvania Railroad and that a meeting between the Division Engineer, the Highway Department and Borough Engineer Hess had been arranged for next week at which time an attempt will be made to decide upon a plan for this greatly needed improvement.

Mr. Leitzinger also reported that Fifth street and Clark street had been greatly improved. Relative to the sidewalk grade on William street between Merrill and Fulton streets the Highway Department reported that the property owners had objected to the grade proposed by the Borough Engineer and Council and had agreed among themselves on a compromise and as this grade was an improvement over present conditions in that section the Highway Department would not recommend a grade for that street at this time.

The garbage dump proposition was given another turning over and following the presentation of a plan by the Highway Department the Borough Solicitor was directed to arrange with the County Commissioners for the building of a driveway over a water course on their property at the upper corner of the old Goose farm along Clearfield Creek.

The Highway Department was directed to begin at once the repaving of South Second street from Leavy's Point to Spruce street. This was one of the items contained in the 1916 improvement budget and the authorized and will be issued as the funds are required to pay for the work done.

The matter of the veto by the Burgess of the Ordinance providing for the paving of the alley between Market and Locust streets, leading from Third to the intersecting alley between Second and Third streets, presented at last meeting, was taken up and a motion made to reconsider the ordinance. This was unanimously adopted and then a motion made to pass the ordinance over the veto of the Burgess and this was also unanimously adopted and the alley paving will be begun in the very near future.

The Borough Solicitor was directed to prepare Ordinances providing for the paving of the other alleys about town which had been petitioned for by the abutting property owners, who agreed to pay two-thirds the cost of said paving and present same at next meeting.

FREIGHT TRAIN ON
CENTRAL PILES UP

A double-headed New York Central trainload of empty coal cars came to grief on the B. R. & P. tracks at the curve above the Market street station about 12:15 o'clock this afternoon. A car a short distance behind the head engine jumped the track on the curve and went down over the river bank. The car immediately following this one left the rails but the engineman stopped his end of the train before any further damage occurred there.

The pusher on behind kept right on shoving and sweating and succeeded in pulling three other cars up in a heap before he found out there was anything wrong.

A wooden car between two heavy ones was smashed into matchwood by the force of the pressure from front and rear. The pile up occurred on the main track along the siding upon which the Rubin & Cherry show train is stored and you should have seen those carnival attaches hit the tall grass along the track when the smash came and that train started to buckle in the middle. One tall boy coon ran thru three panels of fence before they could stop him.

Fortunately nobody was injured, but the wreck blocked traffic for several hours and was removed by the wreck gang from the local yard.

TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 8, 1919.

WILL PRICES COME DOWN?

Yes, certainly; but wait a minute. Don't go off into a spasm of joy for it will be short-lived and there will most assuredly be a reaction. This question is asked of us almost every day. After giving the matter some thought and since we launched out on a series of business topics yesterday we will today take up the subject of costs and prices. Our views may not coincide with yours and we concede that your view is worth as much as ours. It will be a pleasure to receive contributions for publication on this all absorbing subject from any of our readers.

The necessities of mankind may be roughly divided into three classes: food, wearing apparel, and those manufactured products which he uses in his home, his office or his business.

Food is largely the product of the soil as we in this community are for the most part vegetarians. Prices of vegetable products are about the most uncertain thing in the world and this uncertainty of prices works to the disadvantage of both producer and consumer. There is only one law which governs the prices of vegetable food stuffs and that is the old law of supply and demand. Many may say that farmers' organizations set prices on foodstuffs and this is no doubt not far from the truth but it is also a phase of the supply and demand feature although it may be an artificial means of affecting the law. The housewife is largely to blame for the high prices of vegetables, especially potatoes, onions and all other vegetables which will keep indefinitely, because of the practice of buying in thimble quantities. The merchant is at a tremendous expense in filling these small orders, in many cases extending credit and standing losses to say nothing of the large delivery expense. There are homes in Clearfield to which a grocer's wagon goes every day. It is not uncommon to see one grocer delivering a sack of salt and another a package of baking powder, more often though it is a loaf of bread. This system may not add much to the cost of the salt, the baking powder or the individual loaf of bread but it adds to the percentage of overhead the merchant has to put on his stock and particularly does it add to the fruits, vegetables and other articles on which there is no set price and on which the merchant has a chance to make a little profit. The merchant must to a certain extent play the same game as the proverbial street vender who must make on the "banana" what he loses on the "peanut". Unless we get back to buying tubers and similar vegetables in quantities we must expect to pay a premium for them. We can help ourselves by helping the merchant in this respect. We can do more than that. We have a right to expect that the merchant quit "toadying" to that element which expects night and day service on deliveries without regard to the effect it has on the general level of prices. When the delivery wagon makes two trips to the Jenkins residence, Mrs. Jones and all others who deal at that store are paying part of the bill. When the merchant "toady" to Mrs. Jenkins it is unfair to his other customers. There should be a weight and bulk limit on deliveries. So much for the housewife.

The farmer is not without his faults and it is to be expected that he have some because of his large responsibilities. Two faults are outstanding and glaring. We have had demonstrations of, and the farmer has had the sad experience of holding his wares for high prices. It is the mission of the farmer to feed the world just as much as it is up to the sugar industry to keep us in sweets. We saw a potato famine, not because the farmers had no potatoes but because the farmer would not sell them to us. It was the farmer's duty to supply the demand for potatoes. We believe a fair price was offered. Here is another fault. We have known of farmers hauling a load of perishable vegetables to town and, finding no market at his prices, either dumped it by the wayside or hauled it back to rot or be fed to the cattle. The manufacturer often finds the market glutted with his goods. His course is to sell the goods at a sacrifice, thereby creating a market, for it is an established fact that people are going to take advantage of things that are cheapest and when an article of food takes a drop in price there is a demand created therefor. A loss can be capitalized and we know of no better way for a farmer, a merchant or a manufacturer to make friends than to anticipate his overproduction, his spoilage or his bad judgment and to pass it on to the buyer at a bargain price.

There are so many angles to this food price question that space does not permit a full exposition of it at this writing. This article will be continued tomorrow.

Among the many American women who have found employment in trading salesmen the past few years, Miss Helen Courtney is probably the only one handling her own particular line of goods. Miss Courtney sells the engines and other fire-fighting apparatus for a manufacturing firm in Columbus, O., and is said to be one of the most successful salesmen in the business.

When Good Road, day was celebrated recently at Leompton, Kas. the women of the community, with picnic and shovel took their places on the highway along with the men.

AMERICAN IMMORTALS

THOMAS D. NEIBOUR, Private, Company M, 167th Infantry.

Private Neibour, whose home is at Sugar City, Idaho, was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Landres et St. Georges, France, October 16, 1918. On the afternoon of October 16, when the Cote de Chatillon had just been gained after bitter fighting, and the summit of that strong bulwark in the kienhilde Stellung was being organized, Private Neibour was sent out on patrol with his automatic rifle squad to enfilade enemy machine gun nests. As Private Neibour gained the ridge he set up his automatic rifle and was directly thereafter wounded in both legs by fire from a hostile machine gun on his flank. The advance wave of the enemy troops counter-attacking had about gained the ridge and although practically cut off and surrounded, the remainder of his detachment being killed or wounded, this gallant soldier kept his automatic rifle in operation to such effect that by his own efforts and by fire from the skirmish line of his company at least 300 yards in his rear, the attack was checked. The enemy wave being halted and lying prone, four of the enemy attacked Private Neibour at close quarters. These he killed. He then moved along among the enemy lying on the ground about him, in the midst of the fire from his own lines, and by his coolness and gallantry captured eleven prisoners at the point of his pistol and, although painfully wounded, brought them back to our lines. The counter-attack in full force was arrested, to a large extent, by the single efforts of this soldier, whose heroic exploits took place against the skyline in full view of his entire battalion.

One of the greatest handicaps to the progress of the woman's movement in Japan is an antiquated law which prohibits even the presence of women at any gathering of a political nature.

The Washington State Federation of Woman's Clubs has placed itself on record in favor of a movement to stop extravagant dress by women.

RENTING IS POOR BUSINESS

No Better Time to Build If Site and Style of Structure Are Carefully Chosen—How to Finance the Enterprise.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience, as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

"Why pay rent when rent will pay for a home?" This is a favorite slogan of the real estate and building promoter, and has been used so much that the average renter is apt to be skeptical of its truth. Skeptical or not, it is true in the average case, as anyone with a logical mind will readily see.

The owner of investment property, or property that is rented charges for the use of a house or an apartment what he can get for them. It is true that rent should be fixed so that the owner will get a reasonable return on his investment—enough to pay the taxes, the repairs, a sinking fund to replace the building when it falls into decay, and a reasonable interest on his money. But the law of supply and demand operates in this case just as it does in most others. And just now the demand is such that the owners of rentable property are making up for lean years. They are charging what they can get and that is a plenty.

Profitable to Build.
There never was a time when it was more profitable to build a home. The return on the investment is greater now than it has been in many years, leaving out of consideration the comfort and happiness that comes from living in a home of one's own. The present day rent will pay for a home and leave something of the rent besides.

Building a home, however, is a step that should be given careful consideration. In buying a site the same care should be exercised as in buying anything else that requires a considerable investment. The location with reference to schools, the street, the character of the residents of the neighborhood and above all the probability of that locality improving in popularity, and consequently in value, and whether or not the improvements, such as water and pavements, have been made, all should be taken into consideration.

Selection of Design.
The site chosen, then comes the selection of the design for the home. It is not good policy to build a $10,000 home on a $300 site; neither should a $4,000 house be built on a $4,000 site. The house should be something like in value the others in the neighborhood, for the reason that there may come a time when it will be necessary to sell it.

Illustrated herewith is a modern wood bungalow of six rooms, a size that will provide for the needs of the average family and will be readily salable should that be necessary. The dimensions of the bungalow are 29 feet 6 inches, by 43 feet, which allows plenty of lawn and garden space on a 50-foot lot. The exterior of this bungalow is exceptionally attractive, the wide porch across the front, the long sweep of the roof and the corner window in the attic all make it one of which any owner can be proud.

The house is of standard wood construction, set off by a porch with brick pillars and cement steps. This is economical construction and provides a good weather-tight house.

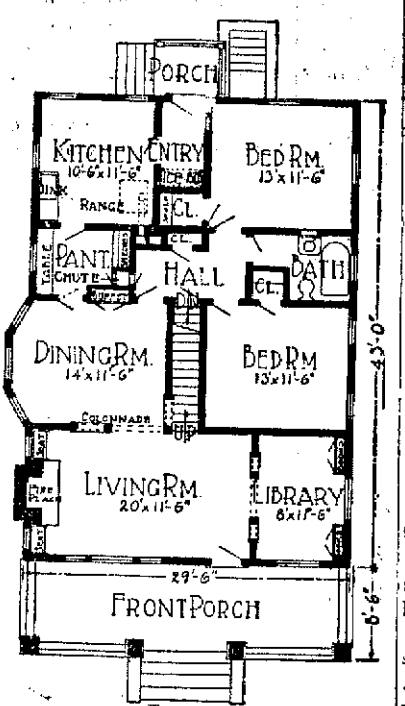

Room Arrangement.

All of the rooms in this bungalow are, of course, on the first floor, but the roof slope permits a large attic space, which helps to keep the house warm in winter and cool in summer. The floor plan shows the room arrangement. Across the front of the house are the living room and library adjoining. Back of the left end of the living room are the dining room and kitchen, while on the other side are two bedrooms with the bath between.

The living room is of good size, 20 feet by 11 feet 6 inches, while the colonnade between it and the library, 8 feet by 11 feet 6 inches, make the two practically one room. The fireplace with seats on either side and windows above are at one end of the living room, while in the library are built-in book cases on either side of the window.

The same colonnade effect is used between the living and dining rooms. The dining room is 13 by 11 feet 6 inches, and has considerable additional room in the large bay window at the end. Between the dining room and the kitchen is the pantry, with shelves and table and a chute for the clothes to be dropped to the basement, where the laundry tubs and other fixtures are located. The kitchen is 10 feet 6 inches, by 11 feet 6 inches and off it is an entryway leading to the back porch.

Both bedrooms and the bath open off a small hall that is reached through the dining room. Each bedroom is 13 by 11 feet 6 inches and has two large windows, permitting plenty of light and ventilation.

A narrow stairway leading out of the living room connects the first floor with the attic, which is large enough for a small bedroom, or a playroom for the children and storage of trunks, etc.

Estimating the Cost.
This bungalow was designed by an experienced architect and has given the owner excellent satisfaction. A consultation with the local builder, material man and architect will bring an estimate of its cost, which is determined largely by the location of the city or town with reference to the supply of materials and the labor situation.

Reverting to the economy of building a home or renting one, the thought naturally arises as to how to finance the building operations.

The lot owner has no difficulty in securing the money to erect a home of a cost that is commensurate with the lot. This is done in several ways, the best being to borrow from the bank on a first mortgage and paying the balance to the contractor in monthly payments, securing him with a second mortgage. In this way the monthly rent payment will in the course of a number of years secure the home for the owner.

Building a home now is an investment that no man who uses ordinary good judgment in the selection of a lot and a design for the house will ever regret.

Velocity of Stars.

From the spectroscopic measurements made at Mount Wilson observatory to determine the radial velocity of stars (i. e., the speed with which they are approaching or receding from our solar system), it appears that the star A. G. Berlin 1368 has a radial velocity of 339 kilometers per second, the highest constant velocity so far observed for any star. Next to this comes Lalande 1068, with a velocity of 325 kilometers per second, in the opposite direction.

J. E. McDONALD PERHAPS FATALY HURT AT NO. 2 BRICKYARD

J. E. McDonald, one of Clearfield's well known residents, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured in a brickworks in Fourth Ward about 1 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. McDonald in company with three other men was engaged in unloading clay on the trestle above the mill at the yard. Two cars had been unloaded and in order to get a third car down to the dumping place Mr. McDonald directed two of the men to go up the track and drop the load down to the opening. The car was allowed to get up some speed, it being the intention to bump the empties sufficiently to drive them beyond the dump to make room for the third car.

When the cars came together Mr. McDonald was caught in some unexpected manner and thrown to the track, the wheels of the loaded car passing over both of his legs. His body was also forced between the ties beneath the trestle and was found lying on the clay pile when his companions failing to see him when the car was stopped went in search of him.

Medical aid was at once summoned and the injured man rushed to the hospital where it was found necessary to amputate one of the legs at once. In addition to the injury to his legs the victim of the distressing accident was otherwise badly bruised and cut and it is feared his injuries will result fatally.

Mr. McDonald is a brother of M. P. McDonald, of Cherry street, and returned to his former home in Clearfield several months ago from Johnstown, Pa., where he resided for a number of years and occupied position of Chief of Police. He was also a special officer for the B. R. & P. Ry. Co. for a time about one year ago.

If Back Hurts Begin On Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally If You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, attended by a sensation of stinging, get about four ounces of Jad Salt from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and our kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juices, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salt is inexpensive and cannot hurt; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Few Jews Will Emigrate to Palestine From America and Great Britain

By OSCAR S. STRAUS, New York Banker

I am not a Zionist, but I am in hearty sympathy with Zionism's idealistic enterprise. Nevertheless I am convinced that the number of Jews who will emigrate to Palestine from, let us say, Great Britain or the United States, is infinitesimal.

Jews in Britain and America have become prosperous and patriotic citizens and in numerous cases prominent figures in the life of those countries. Millions of them, though Jewish by faith and ancestry, are native-born citizens and feel themselves, as they are entitled to do, full-fledged Britons or Americans, as the case may be. I think events of the past four years amply demonstrated that their claims in this respect are justified. The Jewish war record in the United States, I am proud to say, was a splendid one. I am sure it was equally creditable in Great Britain.

Jews are domiciled in large numbers in the two great English-speaking countries and become integral parts of them because of the opportunities for spiritual freedom which they have so long offered. Why should Jews desert such an environment? I cannot conceive any circumstances under which considerable numbers of Jews will ever leave British or American shores.

I am told that anti-Zionists frequently suggest that, with the establishment of a special Jewish state, Jewish citizens of other countries might some day find themselves political outcasts and be told to "go back to your own country."

Nonsense! Stuff and nonsense! To suggest such a thing is to erect a ridiculous bogey. To carry out such a suggestion would be to set back the wheels of liberty which the war we have fought and won have set so far ahead.

We rejoice in New Palestine's foundation. We believe in its legitimacy. We are confident that sooner or later its mission will be accomplished—namely, to afford a comfortable, happy, prosperous national home for the oppressed Jews of all lands. It is because British and American Jews are not oppressed Jews that they will not go to Palestine.

Attractions of First Magnitude at the Carnival

The opening of the Rubin & Cherry Shows at the Weaver lots, corner Third street and Leavy avenues, attracted an immense last night crowd which means a big attendance throughout the week, because every visitor left the grounds a booster for the shows from start to finish.

The guarantee of the firemen as to the character of these shows was an assurance in itself but a visit to the lot and the "once over" satisfied even the most doubting anti-carnivalist. As has already been said the Rubin & Cherry Carnival is in a class by itself and cannot be compared to the aggregations already showing in this section this season.

Instead of the usual fifteen or twenty tops the Rubin & Cherry Shows cover the huge show grounds from street to street and the midway itself is eight hundred feet in length. Compared with the carnivals usually making Clearfield this attraction is a regular three ring circus with the side show thrown in.

Every feature is high class and the different shows are real attractions. Keith headliners rubbing elbows and bidding for favor and patronage with artists who helped make Coney Island famous.

On account of the late arrival Monday morning and the huge size of the carnival it was impossible to get all the shows in shape for last night's exhibition and in consequence thereof visitors were not able to see Rubin & Cherry at their best. Tonight, will be different tonight. Everything is in apple pie order and if you desire an evening of real enjoyment and pleasure and appreciate the clean carnival staff visit the show grounds this evening and every evening this week.

The principal attractions are the Hawaiian Theatre, The Flea Circus, The J. K. L. Wild West, The Plantation, Joyland, The Motorhome, Tent-in-one Side Show, The Hawaiian Theatre is one of the highest priced attractions ever presented by a traveling carnival and was acquired by Mr. Rubin from the Keith Circuit. It is a high class musical show which will especially appeal to Clearfield music lovers.

"The Flea Circus", which first blossomed forth for public favor at Coney Island and received such instantaneous recognition and success, features here Prof. Ruth, the originator of the unique affair. The show instead of being a joke is one of the most interesting to be found anywhere. It appeals to the serious-minded and demonstrates one of the marvels worked by man in the training of insects.

The Wild West is the equal of any feature of the kind carried by the leading circuses and was greeted with a packed house during its one show last evening.

The firemen have a show they are proud of and will appreciate your attendance. In addition to the high class shows enumerated above three riding devices furnish relaxation and pleasure to the kiddos. Also, the older ones who delight in this kind of recreation. The whip is as popular as ever while the big merry-go-round and Ferris wheel are of the very best in their line.

Prof. Baumholder's band with the Rubin & Cherry show is certainly an aggregation of high class musicians and their concerts on the Court House corner twice daily, attract many more than the usual curious crowd because those who stop to listen out of curiosity remain to admire and enjoy the excellent music rendered.

The Handy Man

By RALPH HAMILTON

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.

Old Zeb Darrell stood at the curb, his pipe, just filled, between his lips, an unlighted match in his hand. Its sulphured end was pressed down upon the edge of the iron-bound wheel of a stationary buggy. As its driver started up, the match flared, Zeb ignited the tobacco, uttered a sigh of comfort at having been spared all exertion by cleverly utilizing a convenient source of friction, and was hailed by a bystander, who smiled at the action which fully disclosed the indolent qualities of the old man.

"Looking for a handy man, Perkins," spoke Zeb. "You don't happen to know one, do you?"

"Why, there's Joe Lott, the carpenter, and his old helper, who started in for himself doing odd jobs," but Zeb shook his head dissentingly.

"Plutocrats, with their extravagant charges," he declared. "You see, the old place is pretty high going to rack and ruin. The porch is wobbly, half the front cornice is hanging loose and one edge of the kitchen lost its underpinning last night in the big blow and runs down hill like an ice slide. No, what I'm looking for is some handy fellow who will put in about two weeks tinkering around and mending up odds and ends for his keep, and maybe a little extra."

"Why, come to think of it, perhaps I can help you out," said Zeb's companion. "Unless he's through with his work up at the house, he's there now—a likely, honest seeming young fellow, who came along last evening and offered to fix up the fences for a bed and his meals."

"I'll go right down to your place and see him," said Zeb, eagerly. "If I was as spry as I used to be I'd fix things up myself."

Ward Evans, for so the handy man called himself, had just finished one task and was ready for another. He listened to the story of his prospective employer, readily tracing his nigricardiness, but finally engaging to put in his time at the Darrell place on a reasonable basis of compensation.

"I seem to have a natural knack for tinkering," he explained to Zeb. "You furnish the tools and material and I'll do the rest."

"I should think he had a knack, as he calls it," observed Nettle Darrell to her father a week later, and she glanced admiringly at the ramshackly house. Ward Evans had won her liking magically quick. In the first place he was good looking, and smiling, joking, saying pleasant, cheering things half of the time. He worked without ceasing all day long and had an eye for every loose shingle and flapping board. He practically rebuilt the house, the sheds, the walks, the fences. There was some loose plastering and he made it tight. Two grimy rooms he repapered, straightened up the porch, propped up the sunken kitchen and suggested that a coat of paint would make the old place look like new.

Evans had a flute he played evenings, and he was an expert in its musical possibilities. Regularly he gave his host and his daughter a concert. But it was in his narration of his varied career that he particularly interested them. He had been a circus rider, manager of a ranch, a political orator and superintendent of a logging camp. He loved to refer to this latter experience.

"It was there I met my best friend, Willis Drake," he told his interested auditors. "That was the brightest period of my life—except being with you people," he added, with a glance at Nettle, who flushed slightly, while her father looked pleased at the compliment. "Ah, Willis Drake! a man with a heart of gold—the life of the camp. He left at the end of the season to go back to his father, a wealthy Southerner. He had left home to become a wanderer. I got a letter from him a month ago, and what do you think? His father had died, leaving him a great fortune, and as soon as he settled the estate he's coming to find me, and he insists that we'll be like brothers for the rest of our lives."

Evans received another letter from his friend a week later. The letter was coming after him at once. By this time Ward had become friendly and familiar with the Darrells. He had completed the work he had agreed to do, but he lingered on, and they were glad to have him about, and Ward was gladder still to bask in the sunshine of Nettle's winning smile.

Then his friend arrived and bore him away to the hotel. A handsome, impetuous sort of a fellow, Drake took a decided fancy to Nettle, and Ward encouraged it. What better than to see his dearest friend happy in the possession of a wife worthy of any man, in the estimation of Ward? He sighed as he told this to Mr. Darrell. It was with a sweet pang that he broached the subject of fostering a further mutual liking between Nettle and his friend.

"Well, I've sort of studied Nettle about this match," reported Mr. Darrell, a day or two later. "It's no go. She hasn't the least interest in Drake, outside of his being your friend. In fact, Ward, I'm pretty certain that Nettle is already in love."

"Why, you amaze me!" began Ward. "Who?"

"Are you blind? Who but yourself, my worthy friend? And because I like you, too, I'm glad of it," and humble, self-sacrificing Ward Evans dared to speak his love at last.

Despite the fact that the late Altha E. Barr left an estate of but a few hundred dollars she is known to have earned a large amount of money with her pen. Few American novelists, in fact, have met with greater success from a financial viewpoint than did Mrs. Barr. During her long and active career she wrote a total of nearly one hundred novels. While no one of them created a literary sensation, all of them met with a fair measure of success and their sale yielded the author a steady and substantial income during a period of many years.

WOODLAND HUNTERS CLEARED OF CHARGE OF DEER KILLING

Deputy State Game Protector James Sutton, Jr., of Pittsburg, went down to Shawville yesterday to take up and continue the investigation into the dropping of a doe into the river by an auto mobile party one night in June.

After the package containing the mute evidences of crime had been hurried from an auto into the river the machine continued rapidly over the bridge in the direction of Woodland, but when near the home of Charles Watson it made a quick turn and reversing its course turned back again over the bridge and down toward Surveyor.

It was at first reported that the car had been traced to Woodland and two natives out there were suspected of being implicated, but State College experts have determined after exhaustive test and research that the hair found in the teeth of the suspect was from a groundhog instead of a deer and the theory of Hawkshaw was shot to pieces. Besides those Woodland fellows are all pretty good sports and do their deer slaying the first two weeks in December.

INEFFICIENT HEAD OF
P. O. DEPT. TO STEP OUTCABLED RESIGNATION TO PRESIDENT SOON
AFTER BEING CONDEMNED BY
ATLANTIC LABOR CONVENTION

"QUITS IN INTEREST OF PARTY"

WASHINGTON, July 8.—When President Wilson returns to New York today he will have in his possession the resignation of Postmaster General Burleson.

He offers to retire in the interests of the Democratic party. His resignation was cabled to Paris soon after the meeting of the American Federation of Labor which was held at Atlantic City and at which resolutions were passed condemning Postmaster General Burleson and his administration of postoffice affairs and wire control.

Replying to the cable President Wilson thanked Mr. Burleson for his attitude and stated that the matter would be held for his consideration on his return to America.

It is believed that the resignation of Mr. Burleson has been much desired by the administration for some time and now that it is in the President's hand it will save him from considerable embarrassment.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Postmaster General Burleson today refused to either deny or affirm that he had submitted his resignation to the President. At his office it was pointed out that it was customary for such matters to be discussed only from the White House and that it "would be indelicate to issue any statement." Burleson was one of the three cabinet members who did not go to New York City to greet the President on his arrival there. The others are Secretary of Commerce Redfield and Attorney General Palmer.

NEWSPAPER BIRD
MAN PREPARING

Lieut. Murray, the New York aviator who hopped down into the park the evening of July 4th last, and when he discovered there was an admission charge for park entrance hopped right out over the fence again into Supt. L. P. Geynet's vegetable garden arrived in town yesterday with a couple of mechanics and is now giving his Sopwith Camel a going over preparatory to resuming his flight to New York.

Lieut. Murray is a genial young man and has made many friends in Clearfield since his unceremonious call. He had considerable experience as an army flyer and like all bird men is deeply in love with the flying game. When he dropped here he was carrying pictures of the world's championship battle at Toledo, Ohio, and just as soon as he could divest himself of his flying togs and get "both feet on the ground," so to speak, he jumped into an automobile and was whisked across the mountains to Tyrone where he caught a main line train for New York and got his pictures to the New York American office and into print four hours earlier than the other metropolitan newspapers.

The repairs to the machine are being held up through failure of the necessary parts to arrive by express and if they get here today as expected Lieut. Murray will resume his flight Wednesday or Thursday, stopping at Bellefonte on his way east.

R 34 TO START ON
HOMEWARD JOURNEY
IN THE MORNING

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The United States weather bureau today warned the commander of the British dirigible R-34 that it would be dangerous to start back to Great Britain tomorrow because of impending weather conditions.

MINEOLA, July 8.—Major H. G. Scott, commander of the dirigible R-34, announced shortly after noon today that he would probably start his return journey tomorrow morning at six o'clock. The delay in starting he said was due to the many repairs that had to be made to the engine. The R-34 will cruise over the city of New York for an hour before starting on its homeward trip.

LANSING COMING
HOME THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Secretary of State Lansing will sail for the United States this week it was announced here today. The sailing will not take place today however as has been reported from Paris. Under Secretary Polk will take Lansing's place at Paris in winding up the affairs concerning the peace treaty and the treaty now being made for presentation to Austria.

U. S. DISTRICT ATTORNEY DECLARES WAR ON SALOON
MEN WHO ARE VIOLATING SPIRIT OF PROHIBITION

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—Wholesale arrests of all saloon keepers and other persons selling liquor containing more than 1-2 or 1 per cent. alcohol will be ordered at once, declared U. S. District Attorney Crawford here today.

Agents of the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Office have obtained the evidence against the saloon men and are prepared to furnish the necessary information on which to make arrests. "I am now ready to act," said Mr. Crawford.

A major part of Pittsburgh's saloon men have openly defied the war time prohibition law although advised by their attorneys to get out of business. The Allegheny county authorities are co-operating with the Federal agents.

The government's interpretation of the war prohibition law is that it is a violation to sell for beverage purposes any liquors, whether spirituous, malt or vinous, that might be classed as intoxicating liquors having alcoholic contents, regardless of whether they are beer, wine or spirits. And in any case where they contain as much as one-half of one per cent. of alcohol the government's instructions are to institute prosecution in all cases where sales are made, treating such as illegal sales.

This would make it illegal to sell two and three-fourth per cent. beer, wine or any other beverage with that or even less percentage. The government's position is that it is an offense against the law to sell liquors of the above-mentioned class, and that it is not necessary to show that liquor is intoxicating as a matter of fact in each case where illegal sale is alleged, but simply to show that the liquor sold is alcoholic in its contents and as such is classed as intoxicating.

No prosecutions or arrests were made yesterday for violation of the prohibition law.

Attorney W. J. Brennan, counsel for many license holders, stated yesterday that he had been advising his clients since last Tuesday to close or cease selling 2 3/4 per cent beer.

Traffic in all the so-called "non-intoxicating" beverages, classed generally as "near-beer," by drug stores,

ties provided."

Mayor to Stop Sales

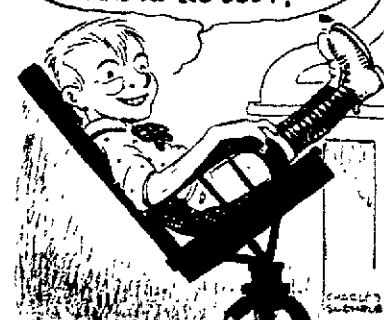

Basing his action on Mr. Cochran's opinion, it was said last night Mayor McDowell will at once order the discontinuance of the sale of any form of "near beer" by soda fountains and all other agencies except regularly licensed hotels and liquor dealers in Chester.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES

Borough Solicitor Urey reported regarding outstanding claims for curbing sewers etc and was directed to proceed at once to collect same. He also brought up the question regarding the width of West Front street at Nichols and was directed by Council to look after the interests of the borough in maintaining a 60 foot street there as the original plan calls for. The Solicitor and Engineer were also directed to secure a copy of the original plan of the W. D. Bigler Addition to West Clearfield Borough and have same placed on record.

Complaint was made by Health officer Farrell and Councilman Gordon regarding sanitary conditions on Bigler avenue and following the discussion the Street Commissioner and Sewer Committee were instructed to proceed at once to have the sanitary sewer will extend from Sixth to Twelfth street and is an improvement very badly needed.

Chairman Leitzinger of the Highway Department reported that the matter of the improvement of Third street had been taken up with the Pennsylvania Railroad and that a meeting between the Division Engineer, the Highway Department and Borough Engineer Hess had been arranged for next week at which time an attempt will be made to decide upon a plan for this greatly needed improvement.

Mr. Leitzinger also reported that Fifth street and Clark street had been greatly improved. Relative to the sidewalk grade on William street between Merrill and Fulton streets the Highway Department reported that the property owners had objected to the grade proposed by the Borough Engineer and Council and had agreed among them-

FREIGHT TRAIN ON
CENTRAL PILES UP

A double-headed New York Central trainload of empty coal cars came to grief on the B. R. & P. tracks at the curve above the Market street station about 12:15 o'clock this afternoon. A car a short distance behind the head engine jumped the track on the curve and went down over the river bank. The car immediately following this one left the rails but the engineman stopped his end of the train before any further damage occurred there.

The pusher on behind kept right on shoving and sweating and succeeded in piling three other cars up in a heap before he found out there was anything wrong.

A wooden car between two heavy ones was smashed into matchwood by the force of the pressure from front and rear.

The pile up occurred on the main track along the siding upon which the Rubin & Cherry show train is stored and you should have seen those carnival attaches hit the tall grass along the track when the smash came and that train started to buckle in the middle. One tall boy coon ran thru three panels of fence before they could stop him.

Fortunately nobody was injured, but the wreck blocked traffic for several hours and was removed by the wreck gang from the local yard.

WILL PRICES COME DOWN?

Yes, certainly; but wait a minute. Don't go off into a spasm of joy for it will be short-lived and there will most assuredly be a reaction. This question is asked of us almost every day. After giving the matter some thought and since we launched out on a series of business topics yesterday we will today take up the subject of costs and prices. Our views may not coincide with yours and we concede that your view is worth as much as ours. It will be a pleasure to receive contributions for publication on this all absorbing subject from any of our readers.

The necessities of mankind may be roughly divided into three classes: food, wearing apparel, and those manufactured products which he uses in his home, his office or his business.

Food is largely the product of the soil as we in this community are for the most part vegetarians. Prices of vegetable products are about the most uncertain thing in the world and this uncertainty of prices works to the disadvantage of both producer and consumer. There is only one law which governs the prices of vegetable food stuffs and that is the old law of supply and demand. Many may say that farmers' organizations set prices on foodstuffs and this is no doubt not far from the truth but it is also a phase of the supply and demand feature although it may be an artificial means of affecting the law. The housewife is largely to blame for the high prices of vegetables, especially potatoes, onions and all other vegetables which will keep indefinitely, because of the practice of buying in thimble quantities. The merchant is at a tremendous expense in filling these small orders, in many cases extending credit and standing losses to say nothing of the large delivery expense. There are homes in Clearfield to which a grocer's wagon goes every day. It is not uncommon to see one grocer delivering a sack of salt and another a package of baking powder, more often though it is a loaf of bread. This system may not add much to the cost of the salt, the baking powder or the individual loaf of bread but it adds to the percentage of overhead the merchant has to put on his stock and particularly does it add to the fruits, vegetables and other articles on which there is no set price and on which the merchant has a chance to make a little profit. The merchant must to a certain extent play the same game as the proverbial street vendor who must make on the "banana" what he loses on the "peanut". Unless we get back to buying tubers and similar vegetables in quantities we must expect to pay a premium for them. We can help ourselves by helping the merchant in this respect. We can do more than that. We have a right to expect that the merchant quit "toadying" to that element which expects night and day service on deliveries without regard to the effect it has on the general level of prices. When the delivery wagon makes two trips to the Jenkins residence, Mrs. Jones and all others who deal at that store are paying part of the bill. When the merchant "toady" to Mrs. Jenkins it is unfair to his other customers. There should be a weight and bulk limit on deliveries. So much for the housewife.

The farmer is not without his faults and it is to be expected that he have some because of his large responsibilities. Two faults are outstanding and glaring. We have had demonstrations of, and the farmer has had the sad experience of holding his wares for high prices. It is the mission of the farmer to feed the world just as much as it is up to the sugar industry to keep us in sweets. We saw a potato famine, not because the farmers had no potatoes but because the farmer would not sell them to us. It was the farmer's duty to supply the demand for potatoes. We believe a fair price was offered. Here is another fault. We have known of farmers hauling a load of perishable vegetables to town and, finding no market at his prices, either dumped it by the wayside or hauled it back to rot or be fed to the cattle. The manufacturer often finds the market glutted with his goods. His course is to sell the goods at a sacrifice, thereby creating a market, for it is an established fact that people are going to take advantage of things that are cheapest and when an article of food takes a drop in price there is a demand created therefor. A loss can be capitalized and we know of no better way for a farmer, a merchant or a manufacturer to make friends than to anticipate his overproduction, his spoilage or his bad judgment and to pass it on to the buyer at a bargain price.

There are so many angles to this food price question that space does not permit a full exposition of it at this writing. This article will be continued tomorrow.

Among the many American women who have found employment in trading salesmen the past few years, Miss Helen Courtney is probably the only one handling her own particular line of goods. Miss Courtney sells the engines and other fire-fighting apparatus for a manufacturing firm in Columbus, O., and is said to be one of the most successful salesmen in the business.

When Good Road day was celebrated recently at Leompton, Kas., the women of the community, with picnic shovel took their places on the highways along with the men.

AMERICAN IMMORTALS

THOMAS D. NEIBOUR, Private, Company M, 167th Infantry.

Private Neibour, whose home is at Sugar City, Idaho, was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Landres et St. Georges, France, October 16, 1918. On the afternoon of October 16, when the Cote de Chatillon had just been gained after bitter fighting, and the summit of that strong bulwark in the kienhilde Stellung was being organized, Private Neibour was sent out on patrol with his automatic rifle squad to enfilade enemy machine gun nests. As Private Neibour gained the ridge he set up his automatic rifle and was directly thereafter wounded in both legs by fire from a hostile machine gun on his flank. The advance wave of the enemy troops counter-attacking had about gained the ridge and although practically cut off and surrounded, the remainder of his detachment being killed or wounded, this gallant soldier kept his automatic rifle in operation to such effect that by his own efforts and by fire from the skirmish line of his company at least 300 yards in his rear, the attack was checked. The enemy wave being halted and lying prone, four of the enemy attacked Private Neibour at close quarters. These he killed. He then moved along among the enemy lying on the ground about him, in the midst of the fire from his own lines, and by his coolness and gallantry captured eleven prisoners at the point of his pistol and, although painfully wounded, brought them back to our lines. The counter-attack in full force was arrested, to a large extent, by the single efforts of this soldier, whose heroic exploits took place against the skyline in full view of his entire battalion.

One of the greatest handicaps to the progress of the woman's movement in Japan is an antiquated law which prohibits even the presence of women at any gathering of a political nature.

The Washington State Federation of Woman's Clubs has placed itself on record in favor of a movement to stop extravagant dress by women.

RENTING IS POOR BUSINESS

No Better Time to Build If Site and Style of Structure Are Carefully Chosen—How to Finance the Enterprise.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience, as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1327 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

"Why pay rent when rent will pay for a home?" This is a favorite slogan of the real estate and building promoter, and has been used so much that the average renter is apt to be skeptical of its truth. Skeptical or not, it is true in the average case, as anyone with a logical mind will readily see.

The owner of investment property, or property that is rented charges for the use of a house or an apartment what he can get for them. It is true that rent should be fixed so that the owner will get a reasonable return on his investment—enough to pay the taxes, the repairs, a sinking fund to replace the building when it falls into decay, and a reasonable interest on his money. But the law of supply and demand operates in this case just as it does in most others. And just now the demand is such that the owners of rentable property are making up for lean years. They are charging what they can get and that is a plenty.

Profitable to Build.
There never was a time when it was more profitable to build a home. The return on the investment is greater now than it has been in many years, leaving out of consideration the comfort and happiness that comes from living in a home of one's own. The present day rent will pay for a home and leave something of the rent besides.

Building a home, however, is a step that should be given careful consideration. In buying a site the same care should be exercised as in buying anything else that requires a considerable investment. The location with reference to schools, the street, the character of the residents of the neighborhood and above all the probability of that locality improving in popularity, and consequently in value, and whether or not the improvements, such as water and pavements, have been made, all should be taken into consideration.

Selection of Design.
The site chosen, then comes the selection of the design for the home. It is not good policy to build a $10,000 home on a $300 site; neither should a $4,000 house be built on a $4,000 site. The house should be something like in value the others in the neighborhood, for the reason that there may come a time when it will be necessary to sell it.

Illustrated herewith is a modern wood bungalow of six rooms, a size that will provide for the needs of the average family and will be readily salable should that be necessary. The dimensions of the bungalow are 29 feet 6 inches, by 43 feet, which allows plenty of lawn and garden space on a 50-foot lot. The exterior of this bungalow is exceptionally attractive, the wide porch across the front, the long sweep of the roof and the dormer window in the attic all make it one of which any owner can be proud.

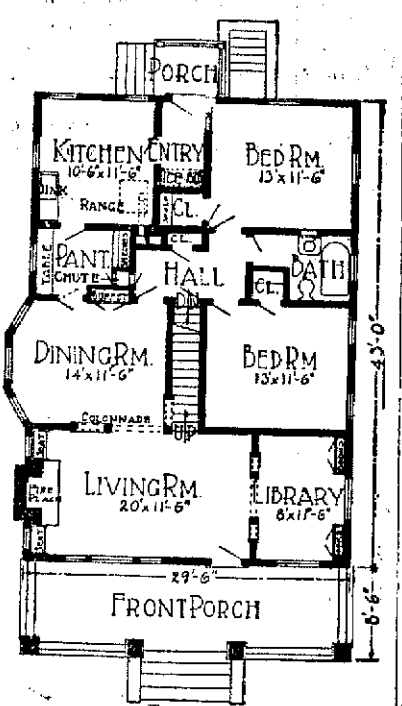

The house is of standard wood construction, set off by a porch with brick pillars and cement steps. This is economical construction and provides a good weather-tight house.

Room Arrangement.
All of the rooms in this bungalow are, of course, on the first floor, but the roof slope permits a large attic space, which helps to keep the house warm in winter and cool in summer. The floor plan shows the room arrangement. Across the front of the house are the living room and library adjoining. Back of the left end of the living room are the dining room and kitchen, while on the other side are two bedrooms with the bath between.

The living room is of good size, 20 feet by 11 feet 6 inches, while the colonnade between it and the library, 8 feet by 11 feet 6 inches, make the two practically one room. The fireplace with seats on either side and windows above are at one end of the living room, while in the library are built-in book cases on either side of the window.

The same colonnade effect is used between the living and dining rooms. The dining room is 13 by 11 feet 6 inches, and has considerable additional room in the large bay window at the end. Between the dining room and the kitchen is the pantry, with shelves and table and a chute for the clothes to be dropped to the basement, where the laundry tubs and other fixtures are located. The kitchen is 10 feet 6 inches, by 11 feet 6 inches and off it is an entryway leading to the back porch.

Both bedrooms and the bath open off a small hall that is reached through the dining room. Each bedroom is 13 by 11 feet 6 inches and has two large windows, permitting plenty of light and ventilation.

A narrow stairway leading out of the living room connects the first floor with the attic, which is large enough for a small bedroom, or a playroom for the children and storage of trunks, etc.

Estimating the Cost.
This bungalow was designed by an experienced architect and has given the owner excellent satisfaction. A consultation with the local builder, material man and architect will bring an estimate of its cost, which is determined largely by the location of the city or town with reference to the supply of materials and the labor situation.

Reverting to the economy of building a home or renting one, the thought naturally arises as to how to finance the building operations.

The lot owner has no difficulty in securing the money to erect a home of a cost that is commensurate with the lot. This is done in several ways, the best being to borrow from the bank on a first mortgage and paying the balance to the contractor in monthly payments, securing him with a second mortgage. In this way the monthly rent payment will in the course of a number of years secure the home for the owner.

Building a home now is an investment that no man who uses ordinary good judgment in the selection of a lot and a design for the house will ever regret.

Velocity of Stars.
From the spectroscopic measurements made at Mount Wilson observatory to determine the radial velocity of stars (i. e., the speed with which they are approaching or receding from our solar system), it appears that the star A. G. Berlin 1368 has a radial velocity of 339 kilometers per second, the highest constant velocity so far observed for any star. Next to this comes Lalande 1068, with a velocity of 325 kilometers per second, in the opposite direction.

J. E. McDONALD PERHAPS FATALLY HURT AT NO. 2 BRICKYARD

J. E. McDonald, one of Clearfield's well known residents, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured in a brickworks in Fourth Ward about 1 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. McDonald in company with three other men was engaged in unloading clay on the trestle above the mill at the yard. Two cars had been unloaded and in order to get a third car down to the dumping place Mr. McDonald directed two of the men to go up the track and drop the load down to the opening. The car was allowed to get up some speed, it being the intention to bump the empties sufficiently to drive them beyond the dump to make room for the third car.

When the cars came together Mr. McDonald was caught in some unexpected manner and thrown to the track, the wheels of the loaded car passing over both of his legs. His body was also forced between the ties beneath the trestle and was found lying on the clay pile when his companions failing to see him when the car was stopped went in search of him.

Medical aid was at once summoned and the injured man rushed to the hospital where it was found necessary to amputate one of the legs at once. In addition to the injury to his legs the victim of the distressing accident was otherwise badly bruised and cut and it is feared his injuries will result fatally.

Mr. McDonald is a brother of M. P. McDonald, of Cherry street, and returned to his former home in Clearfield several months ago from Johnstown, Pa., where he resided for a number of years and occupied position of Chief of Police. He was also a special officer for the B. R. & P. Ry. Co. for a time about one year ago.

LATER.—Mr. McDonald succumbed to his injuries, dying about 3:20 o'clock.

If Back Hurts Begin On Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally If You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, attended by a sensation of stinging, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and our kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juices, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot hurt; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Few Jews Will Emigrate to Palestine From America and Great Britain

By OSCAR S. STRAUS, New York Banker

I am not a Zionist, but I am in hearty sympathy with Zionism's idealistic enterprise. Nevertheless I am convinced that the number of Jews who will emigrate to Palestine from, let us say, Great Britain or the United States, is infinitesimal.

Jews in Britain and America have become prosperous and patriotic citizens and in numerous cases prominent figures in the life of those countries. Millions of them, though Jewish by faith and ancestry, are native-born citizens and feel themselves, as they are entitled to do, full-fledged Britons or Americans, as the case may be. I think events of the past four years amply demonstrated that their claims in this respect are justified. The Jewish war record in the United States, I am proud to say, was a splendid one. I am sure it was equally creditable in Great Britain.

Jews are domiciled in large numbers in the two great English-speaking countries and become integral parts of them because of the opportunities for spiritual freedom which they have so long offered. Why should Jews desert such an environment? I cannot conceive any circumstances under which considerable numbers of Jews will ever leave British or American shores.

I am told that anti-Zionists frequently suggest that, with the establishment of a special Jewish state, Jewish citizens of other countries might some day find themselves political outcasts and be told to "go back to your own country."

Nonsense! Stuff and nonsense! To suggest such a thing is to erect a ridiculous bogey. To carry out such a suggestion would be to set back the wheels of liberty which the war we have fought and won have set so far ahead.

We rejoice in New Palestine's foundation. We believe in its legitimacy. We are confident that sooner or later its mission will be accomplished—namely, to afford a comfortable, happy, prosperous national home for the oppressed Jews of all lands. It is because British and American Jews are not oppressed Jews that they will not go to Palestine.

ATTRACTIONS OF FIRST MAGNITUDE AT THE CARNIVAL

The opening of the Rubin & Cherry Shows at the Weaver lots, corner Third street and Leavy avenues, attracted an immense last night crowd which means a big attendance throughout the week, because every visitor left the grounds a booster for the shows from start to finish.

The guarantee of the firemen as to the character of these shows was an assurance in itself but a visit to the lot and the "once over" satisfied even the most doubting anti-carnivalist. As has already been said the Rubin & Cherry Carnival is in a class by itself and cannot be compared to the aggregations already showing in this section this season.

Instead of the usual fifteen or twenty tops the Rubin & Cherry Shows cover the huge show grounds from street to street and the midway itself is eight hundred feet in length. Compared with the carnivals usually making Clearfield this attraction is a regular three ring circus with the side show thrown in.

Every feature is high class and the different shows are real attractions. Keith headliners rubbing elbows and bidding for favor and patronage with artists who helped make Coney Island famous.

On account of the late arrival Monday morning and the huge size of the carnival it was impossible to get all the shows in shape for last night's exhibition and in consequence thereof visitors were not able to see Rubin & Cherry at their best. Tonight, will be different tonight. Everything is in apple pie order and if you desire an evening of real enjoyment and pleasure and appreciate the clean carnival staff visit the show grounds this evening and every evening this week.

The principal attractions are the Hawaiian Theatre, The Flea Circus, The J. K. L. Wild West, The Plantation, Joyland, The Motorhome, Tent-in-one Side Show, The Hawaiian Theatre is one of the highest priced attractions ever presented by a traveling Carnival and was acquired by Mr. Rubin from the Keith Circuit. It is a high class musical show which will especially appeal to Clearfield music lovers.

"The Flea Circus", which first blossomed forth for public favor at Coney Island and received such instantaneous recognition and success, features here Prof. Ruth, the originator of the unique affair. The show instead of being a joke is one of the most interesting to be found anywhere. It appeals to the serious-minded and demonstrates one of the

The Handy Man

By RALPH HAMILTON

Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.

Old Zeb Darrell stood at the curb, his pipe, just filled, between his lips, an unlighted match in his hand. Its sulphured end was pressed down upon the edge of the iron-bound wheel of a stationary buggy. As its driver started up, the match flared, Zeb ignited the tobacco, uttered a sigh of comfort at having been spared all exertion by cleverly utilizing a convenient source of friction, and was hailed by a bystander, who smiled at the action which fully disclosed the indolent qualities of the old man.

"Looking for a handy man, Perkins," spoke Zeb. "You don't happen to know one, do you?"

"Why, there's Joe Lott, the carpenter, and his old helper, who started in for himself doing odd jobs," but Zeb shook his head dissentingly.

"Plutocrats, with their extravagant charges," he declared. "You see, the old place is pretty high going to rack and ruin. The porch is wobbly, half the front cornice is hanging loose and one edge of the kitchen lost its underpinning last night in the big blow and runs down hill like an ice slide. No, what I'm looking for is some handy fellow who will put in about two weeks tinkering around and mending up odds and ends for his keep, and shake a little extra."

"Why, come to think of it, perhaps I can help you out," said Zeb's companion. "Unless he's through with his work up at the house, he's there now—a likely, honest seeming young fellow, who came along last evening and offered to fix up the fences for a bed and his meals."

"I'll go right down to your place and see him," said Zeb, eagerly. "If I was as spry as I used to be I'd fix things up myself."

Ward Evans, for so the handy man called himself, had just finished one task and was ready for another. He listened to the story of his prospective employer, readily tracing his nigricardiness, but finally engaging to put in his time at the Darrell place on a reasonable basis of compensation.

"I seem to have a natural knack for tinkering," he explained to Zeb. "You furnish the tools and material and I'll do the rest."

"I should think he had a knack, as he calls it," observed Nettie Darrell to her father a week later, and she glanced admiringly at the ramshackly house. Ward Evans had won her liking magically quick. In the first place he was good looking, and smiling, joking, saying pleasant, cheering things half of the time. He worked without ceasing all day long and had an eye for every loose shingle and flapping board. He practically rebuilt the house, the sheds, the walks, the fences. There was some loose plastering and he made it tight. Two grimy rooms he repapered, straightened up the porch, propped up the sunken kitchen and suggested that a coat of paint would make the old place look like new.

Evans had a flute he played evenings, and he was an expert in its musical possibilities. Regularly he gave his host and his daughter a concert. But it was in his narration of his varied career that he particularly interested them. He had been a circus rider, manager of a ranch, a political orator and superintendent of a logging camp. He loved to refer to this latter experience.

"It was there I met my best friend, Willis Drake," he told his interested auditors. "That was the brightest period of my life—except being with you people," he added, with a glance at Nettie, who flushed slightly, while her father looked pleased at the compliment. "Ah, Willis Drake! a man with a heart of gold—the life of the camp. He left at the end of the season to go back to his father, a wealthy Southerner. He had left home to become a wanderer. I got a letter from him a month ago, and what do you think? His father had died, leaving him a great fortune, and as soon as he settled the estate he's coming to find me, and he insists that we'll be like brothers for the rest of our lives."

Evans received another letter from his friend a week later. The letter was coming after him at once. By this time Ward had become friendly and familiar with the Darrells. He had completed the work he had agreed to do, but he lingered on, and they were glad to have him about, and Ward was gladder still to bask in the sunshine of Nettie's winning smile.

Then his friend arrived and bore him away to the hotel. A handsome, impetuous sort of a fellow, Drake took a decided fancy to Nettie, and Ward encouraged it. What better than to see his dearest friend happy in the possession of a wife worthy of any man, in the estimation of Ward? He sighed as he told this to Mr. Darrell. It was with a sweet pang that he broached the subject of fostering a further mutual liking between Nettie and his friend.

"Well, I've sort of studied Nettie about this match," reported Mr. Darrell, a day or two later. "It's no go. She hasn't the least interest in Drake, outside of his being your friend. In fact, Ward, I'm pretty certain that Nettie is already in love."

"Why, you amaze me!" began Ward.

"Are you blind? Who but yourself, my worthy friend? And because I like you, too, I'm glad of it," and humble, self-sacrificing Ward Evans dared to speak his love at last.

When they arrived there they found a family of foreign extraction, in attempting to settle their differences, had resorted to "cave man" tactics and needed no outside assistance.

Despite the fact that the late Altha E. Barr left an estate of but a few hundred dollars she is known to have earned a large amount of money with her pen. Few American novelists, in fact, have met with greater success from a financial viewpoint than did Mrs. Barr. During her long and active career she wrote a total of nearly one hundred novels. While no one of them created a literary sensation, all of them met with a fair measure of success and their sale yielded the author a steady and substantial income during a period of many years.

WOODLAND HUNTERS CLEARED OF CHARGE OF DEER KILLING

Deputy State Game Protector James Sutton, Jr., of Pittsburgh, went down to Shawville yesterday to take up and continue the investigation into the dropping of a doe into the river by an auto mobile party one night in June.

After the package containing the mute evidences of crime had been hurried from an auto into the river the machine continued rapidly over the bridge in the direction of Woodland, but when near the home of Charles Watson it made a quick turn and reversing its course turned back again over the bridge and down toward Surveyor.

It was at first reported that the car had been traced to Woodland and two natives out there were suspected of being implicated, but State College experts have determined after exhaustive test and research that the hair found in the teeth of the suspect was from a groundhog instead of a deer and the theory of Hawkshaw was shot to pieces. Besides those Woodland fellows are all pretty good sports and do their deer slaying the first two weeks in December.
